SALLY LYNN MOORE
... Betrothal Told

YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

"At first we thought it was cute"

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is just crazy about the Three Stooges. He watches them every chance he gets. We have two children, a boy and a girl 2.

The boy is beginning to act like Moe. At first we thought it was cute. Now we aren't so sure. Do you think this may handicap him in later life? We are young parents who want to do right by our children. Please tell us how to handle this situation. — MOTHER OF "MOE"

Dear Mother: Children often mimic movie stars and TV performers. Usually it's just a passing fancy — unless too much is made of it. If you don't want your son to act like Moe don't reward his imitations with approval. No one wants to perform for an unresponsive audience.

One of the healthy aspects of American culture is that the third rate stuff on TV (of which there is plenty) seldom lasts long enough to do serious damage.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm so crushed I don't know which way to turn. Our daughter, 18, is pregnant and not married. I know it happens every day, but like everyone else, I never thought it would happen in our family.
